REVOLUTIONARY IDEA PRODUCES NEW FUEL

Three men who know cars and the stuff it takes to make 'em go and keep 'em going are here seen registering amazement as they inspect the General Petroleum Company's "Torture Test" motor which provides the run from New York to the Pacific Coast minus radiator and cooling system. The run was one of the tests which resulted in production of General Mobilgas. Left to right above, E. W. Gachet, plant manager; Al Miller, secretary-treasurer; and J. M. Hunt, supervisor of planning and traffic, all of the Chrysler Corporation. The Pacific Coast Chrysler plant is shown in the background.

Testing grounds, where experimental models of automobiles are subjected to marvellous abuse deliberately designed to break them down, have long been an accepted fact among motor manufacturers. Only in this way can defects in design and construction be brought to light and a perfect model produced. Now, for the first time in the history of gasoline manufacture, the same principle has been applied to the production of a new motor fuel, according to A. H. DeFries, vice-president in charge of sales of General Petroleum Corporation.

"Inception of this revolutionary idea for a gasoline did not occur yesterday," DeFries declared in a recent interview. "For several years past petroleum scientists employed by Socony-Vacuum Corporation, of which General Petroleum is the Pacific Coast affiliate, have been engaged in making a series of tests of motor fuels, as those to which motor makers have subjected their product. Cars, their tanks filled with test fuel, have been driven up and down the North American continent from the Arctic Circle to the torrid heat of southern Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific in all kinds of weather, running at

Memorial Poppies Sold In May

Furnish Employment to Veterans

Memorial poppies which the women of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute here on "Poppy Day," May 26, have been a means of providing employment to hundreds of disabled World War veterans through the winter and spring months, according to Mrs. N. F. Gallucci, rehabilitation chairman of the local auxiliary unit. The little red flowers have made possible earnings of approximately $100,000 for these disabled men, she stated.

"Making of the paper poppies, which the American Legion Auxiliary offers on 'Poppy Day' to be worn in honor of the World War disabled, is reserved strictly for the war disabled," Mrs. N. F. Gallucci explained. "It offers a means of employment to veterans unable to do other work and not only brings them money for the support of themselves and families, but aids in their rehabilitation by giving them beneficial, interesting work."

"The poppies are made in government hospitals and in special poppy workrooms maintained by the auxiliary. This year 18 disabled poppy making centers have been in operation in 40 states. Employment is restricted to men unable to do work of other types and preference is given those with families to support. The paper poppy is used exclusively by the auxiliary because its making is a hand rather than machine process."

"The best of working conditions are, of course, provided for the disabled men employed in the poppy project. The number of poppies that a man can make in one day is restricted in order that the workers will not tax their strength. The work is directed in such a manner that it will aid in the physical and mental rehabilitation of the veterans, as well as giving them financial benefits. The money contributed for the poppies pays the wages of the poppy-makers and helps support the Legion and auxiliary activities for the welfare of the disabled veterans and dependent families."
